This live, interactive IEW class will engage your student, who is in grades nine through eleven, each week. Students receive clear, consistent writing instruction with live classes and grading provided in a timely fashion. Each class can be used for a full writing credit. Units one through nine will be covered. Attending a live class is essential for success, however, sessions will be recorded and available for one week. Classes are taught using methodology by The Institute for Excellence in Writing® by a teacher experienced with this method.

IEW's Structure and Style® writing method will give your students a toolbox so that they have confidence-building tools, which lays the groundwork for a lifetime of excellent writing. My focus is to assist your student to gain skills to confidently communicate by learning to write well, think clearly, and express themselves eloquently and persuasively.

Note: This class has a six student minimum.

Recommended

This class is a level B and is recommended for students in 8th – 11th grade. Parents are required to actively participate in the homework process. During class, structure will be introduced, explained, and modeled. Tools will be provided to add style. Students will also gain knowledge of organizing as they assemble their binder on a weekly basis. Assignments will need to be typed using Word or Google docs by the student or with parental assistance.

Students who have completed Year 1 Level B (SSS-1B) or one years of a “B” level theme-based book are ready for an exciting journey using new and engaging sources. This course may also be taken with special permission from the teacher. We will review and refine the nine previously learned IEW units, then press into writing responses to literature.

Technical Requirements

A computer with high-speed internet along with a headset, working camera, and microphone. Assignments are turned in via Canvas.

Parent Responsibilities

Parents are the primary educators. My goal is to come alongside you to teach writing concepts, grammar presented in the book, and explain stylistic techniques while you provide the quiet learning environment, keep your students on task during class time, review lessons, edit, and ensure that coursework is properly completed and submitted.
